

Can UPU agree a last-minute terminal dues deal to satisfy the USA?

24-09-2019

UPU members will have to find a last-minute compromise agreement for fairer cross-border parcel delivery rates at an emergency conference in Geneva this week to keep the USA in the world's postal system. Delegates from 192 member countries will have a choice of three options to reform the much-criticised terminal dues payment system for cross-border small packets at the three-day UPU Extraordinary Congress, which CEP-Research will be reporting live from. In brief, the three alternative proposals, which could be amended during the Congress, are: Increase existing rates and move to a single rate system Allow countries to set their own self-declared rates Increase existing rates and move to a single rate system, but with optional self-declared rates
