

Leading posts recognise urgency for continuous sector cooperation on sustainability and reporting

30-05-2023

“ Over 80 high-level representatives from 30 posts worldwide, including 20 CEOs met in Dublin, Ireland for the IPC 2023 Annual Conference hosted by An Post. “ Posts agreed on the urgency to further increase cooperation and find common ground between different standards and programmes to ensure global approach towards sustainability reporting. “ Posts call for action from all emission contributors throughout the value chain.

“Sustainability is the topic that unites all IPC members as posts were the first sector to develop a joint programme to reduce emissions globally. It is of strategic importance to face together the global climate change challenge. Therefore we now need to rapidly reinforce our cooperation and develop a more granular reporting system and find common ground between the different standards”.

Dublin, 30 May 2023 – Over 80 high-level representatives from 30 posts worldwide, including 20 CEOs met in Dublin for the IPC 2023 Annual Conference on 25-26 May. Hosted by An Post, the theme of this year’s IPC Annual Conference was “The Postal Contribution to Emissions’ Reduction”.

Holger Winklbauer, IPC CEO, says:

IPC is working closely with its member sustainability experts to evaluate current and future carbon reporting needs, based on global stakeholders’ requirements. Posts are highly committed to continue collaborating together.

Posts tasked IPC together with the sustainability expert group to further identify the most suitable standards, to develop the guidelines for the postal sector and explore the most efficient means to achieve these goals.

The Annual Conference featured four keynote speakers who shared their thoughts on the evolution of carbon footprint reporting needs as well as customers' requirements for sustainable delivery, including rapidly changing needs and expectations from customers for e-commerce delivery, including: included Ben Lechner, Amazon EU Transportation Director; Mehdi El Alami, Oliver Wyman; Andrea Dorothea Schoen, Smart Freight Centre Program Manager and Professor Richard Barker, International Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB).
