In part of the country, Posti is distributing the letter from the authorities for the citizens regarding the coronavirus. The letter is aimed at making sure that each citizen receives information about the coronavirus and how to prepare for it.

The government decided on March 12 to send an info package to the homes of all Finns as part of the effort to restrict the spread of the coronavirus. The letter was implemented by the National Institute for Health and Welfare together with the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health.

“In this crisis, the importance of cooperation between different actors has been highlighted even more than before. It is important for us here at Posti that we are also able to help fulfill our social responsibility in terms of this letter for Finnish citizens,” says Posti’s Sami Reponen.

Posti has already delivered the info packages in the Helsinki region. Next week, on Thursday, April 4, Posti will also deliver info packages in other parts of the country, in the areas marked in green. The deliveries are to be carried out by another delivery company in the areas marked in red.

Posti is prepared for the spread of the coronavirus

You can read about Posti’s preparations for the coronavirus as well as the effects of the coronavirus on our services in the notice on our website at posti.fi or posti.com. On our website, you can also find a section on the Frequently asked questions about the coronavirus.

Our personnel have access to instructions that are based on the government guidelines. Work is carried out according to these instructions so that our personnel will not spread the virus or be infected themselves.
