

Night Star Express keeps volumes stable in 2017 despite customer losses

12-01-2018

Night Star Express, Europe's second-largest in-night delivery company, recorded a slight shipment volume increase in 2017 transporting 5.37 million shipments even though it lost some business. The German-based in-night delivery specialist was able to keep its shipment volumes stable last year at the previous year's level when it transported 5.36 million shipments, despite ongoing, price-intensive competition which led to customer losses. The company does not disclose revenues or profit figures.
